In 1924 the National Recreation Association of America (NRA) proposed a ranking system of national parks, beginning with the world's oldest park, Yellowstone, in Montana. The list was updated in 1935 and in 1965, when the NRA classified the parks as "needs-based" and subsequently into "priority" and "semi-priority" categories. In 1975, the NRA and the National Park Service (NPS) jointly revised the criteria for designating national parks and the associated ecosystem lands to emphasize scenic and ecological benefits, while reducing the emphasis on recreation. The current national park system is composed of more than 400 units that include national parks, national monuments, other designated areas, and wilderness areas. These units protect a variety of landscapes, ecosystems, and cultural resources, and range in size from the small Joshua Tree National Monument in California to the vast acreage of Yellowstone National Park. The units also contain a range of resources, from agricultural lands to wildlife habitat, and from developed tourist facilities to undeveloped backcountry wilderness. The basic criterion for designating national parks is that they must contain "some of the nation's outstanding natural features and extraordinary scenery, including superlative examples of plant and animal life." National park lands are not designated because they provide the a charge of rape in 1978. He was convicted and sentenced to death. Moore's direct appeal to this Court was consolidated with the appeal from his state post-conviction proceedings in 1989. See Moore v. State, 588 N.E.2d *974 1298, 1301 (Ind. 1992). This Court agreed that the post-conviction proceedings constituted a collateral attack on the judgment, and the direct appeal was res judicata as to all claims presented therein. Id. In addition, we concluded that Moore's trial counsel was not ineffective. Id. We also concluded that any possible claim of denial of the right to self-representation was waived when Moore's request was initially denied, and no objection was lodged until the eve of trial. Id. at 1302. Finally, this Court noted that Moore made a "sufficiently specific demand for the court to appoint standby counsel" and concluded that Moore's other claims were without merit. Id. at 1301-1302. Moore filed a second petition for post-conviction relief in 1998. This Court appointed an attorney to represent Moore for that petition, and Moore filed an

Q: asp.net GridView empty after binding I have a gridView where for example I have two rows of values. On these values there are buttons to expand or collapse them. This works fine for the first time I run the web app, but if I close the browser and open it again, the grid does not load the data and only shows an empty grid. When debugging I found out that the grid is already loaded on page_load of the view, however it only loads the data after a button click. Any clues why this is happening? This is the code I'm using for loading the data:

protected void Page_Load(object sender, EventArgs e) { if (!IsPostBack) { var gridView = sender as GridView; if (gridView == null) return; gridView.DataSource = GetUserData(); gridView.DataBind(); // Set event handler for the button(s) to
