The file or folder you are trying to access could be hidden, which means it may not be shown in Windows Explorer..It's been a while since I've posted anything about the Leafs. The other day, I talked about how things weren't looking good for the future of the Leafs, as they head into the start of the season with a depleted forward corps. I was wrong, or at least I was very, very wrong. It's not as bad as I thought, though, and we'll get to that. The Leafs started their camp this week and the biggest name to see game action was Brooks Laich. In fact, they've had a few camps in the past month, with most every other player seeing significant action. However, everyone of them, including Laich, is still far away from being an NHL player. Brooks will be battling for the 4th center position, starting the season in the press box, and I've not heard of him doing well enough to be pushing for a spot, even if he was out of Ottawa. Similarly, Chris Graboill had a good camp but was already far behind Nate Thompson, who isn't even an NHLer and probably won't be until next year. If that wasn't enough to annoy, the Leafs signed Pavel Kubina to an entry-level contract. In a surprise move, Kubina was traded to the Leafs from Montreal for Alexei Ponikarovsky at the last minute of the lockout, but was already under contract with the Canadiens. I say "
